Our services will provide you with improved control in the management of maintenance, our specialist services will free your management staff from attending to time consuming non core functions which are now strictly governed by statutory requirements which require expertise in managing and supervising such work.

These are our people, the best in the business.

glove is not working or a door lock is malfunctioning we replace it or repair it. There's no limit to the tasks we're asked to perform in managing maintenance in a property portfolio, our key staff have construction & property management expertise".

What is “Non Core”?

It is simple to identify services best suited for outsourcing.

In the Real Estate and Body Corporate Industries, our clients apply their expertise in marketing, selling and managing property. They can only do this by employing licensed real estate agents, property managers, agents' representatives and administrative staff. They all play a vital role in achieving the desired result for their individual client's needs. They ensure any training requirements are satisfied, they keep up to date with changing property laws and code of ethic rulings imposed by industry watchdogs. More recently, property managers have the added responsibility to ensure all maintenance works are carried out in accordance with the Occupational Health and Safety (OH&S) Act. They are now required to comply with work place safety guidelines with appropriate Job Safety Analysis checklists which should be completed by all contractors prior to prescribed works being carried out. The provision of maintenance, cleaning, waste collection OH&S work inspections, Maintenance Plans which comply the new 'Owners Corporations' regulatory framework, and general property preservation are essential, but not core to their industry. They are, however, areas of specialisation for Roscon.

Similarly, the Insurance Industry is reliant on many key factors which must be adhered to by expert and qualified personnel. The industry, like many others, is very competitive and must be kept well informed and in tune to market and property conditions. Key personnel include Licensed Advisers and Brokers and sector executive staff. Key awareness on risk factors such as location, market and replacement costs are the essential drivers of any Insurance Agent.. The reinstatement and prevention of further loss or subsequent damage to other property, however, are areas of specialisation for Roscon.

As property managers throughout the country ensure each property maximises it's value when bought, sold or leased, Roscon work with them to develop cost effective solutions in maximising these returns on expert and professional maintenance, waste collection plans and building preservation and safety strategies which are in compliance with OH&S Laws. Our assistance in these areas allow our clients to focus on the management of each property ensuring their own clients are satisfied by achieving the best possible return.

Regardless of the composition of the service package, the common element is the role of Roscon in managing those areas that are integral to our client's business, but non core to their reason for being in their chosen profession.

In addition to Roscon's provision of an extensive array of services to the above specialised industries, we also assist many private and public companies where property maintenance of any kind exists.

We provide fully comprehensive maintenance contracts in which Roscon takes the risk on repair and maintenance costs.
